

Kim Goldinger

Chair, Board of Advisors
Member, Advancement Committee

Kim Goldinger currently runs Silk Fields, a small education-focused farm in Lexington where she breeds and raises goats and alpacas, along with keeping hens, rabbits, sheep and a few hives of bees. She runs farm campas and has taught classes for numerous organizations about farming, from Tufts to local non-profits. Prior to running the farm, she worked at Motorola.

Kim has worked with numerous non-profits and sat on the Board of Overseers for the Museum of Science for 6 years. Kim and her husband have been GBFB donors since 2001 and hosted the first Farm to Table Dinner, in 2017, at their farm in Lexington. Kim joined the Greater Boston Food Bank's Board of Advisors in October 2020.

Kim received a BS from Florida State University and an MS from the Massachusetts Institute for Technology, both in Electrical Engineering.
